

Freedom is the cornerstone of the American experience and the American democracy. By restricting what satellite radio can broadcast, you are ignoring the tenets of the constitution and the bill of rights.

I pay for my radio service because broadcast radio does not offer formats and songs I enjoy. Satellite radio should be seen as a strong message to all broadcasters about what listeners want: high quality play lists, limited or no commercials, and a wide variety of formats that please even the most discerning of listeners.

The added convenience of traffic and weather complete the satellite radio experience. How dare the NAB dictate what I am allowed to hear on satellite radio? I pay for this service so, as far as I am concerned, it is none of NAB's business what is broadcast.

Legislation and regulations are only going to hurt broadcast radio and satellite radio in the end. Allow the market to dictate what should be heard, and don't try to legislate the competitive threat away. If broadcast radio was playing what consumers wanted, we wouldn't even be having this debate.
